Memories of T. H. S.

Evening shadows find me dreaming,
Of a school I love so well;
As here I sit dreaming, scheming,
How my story best to tell.

Every scene so swiftly passes—
In my crystal-gazing mood;
I live again in my classes,
As my school-life is reviewed.

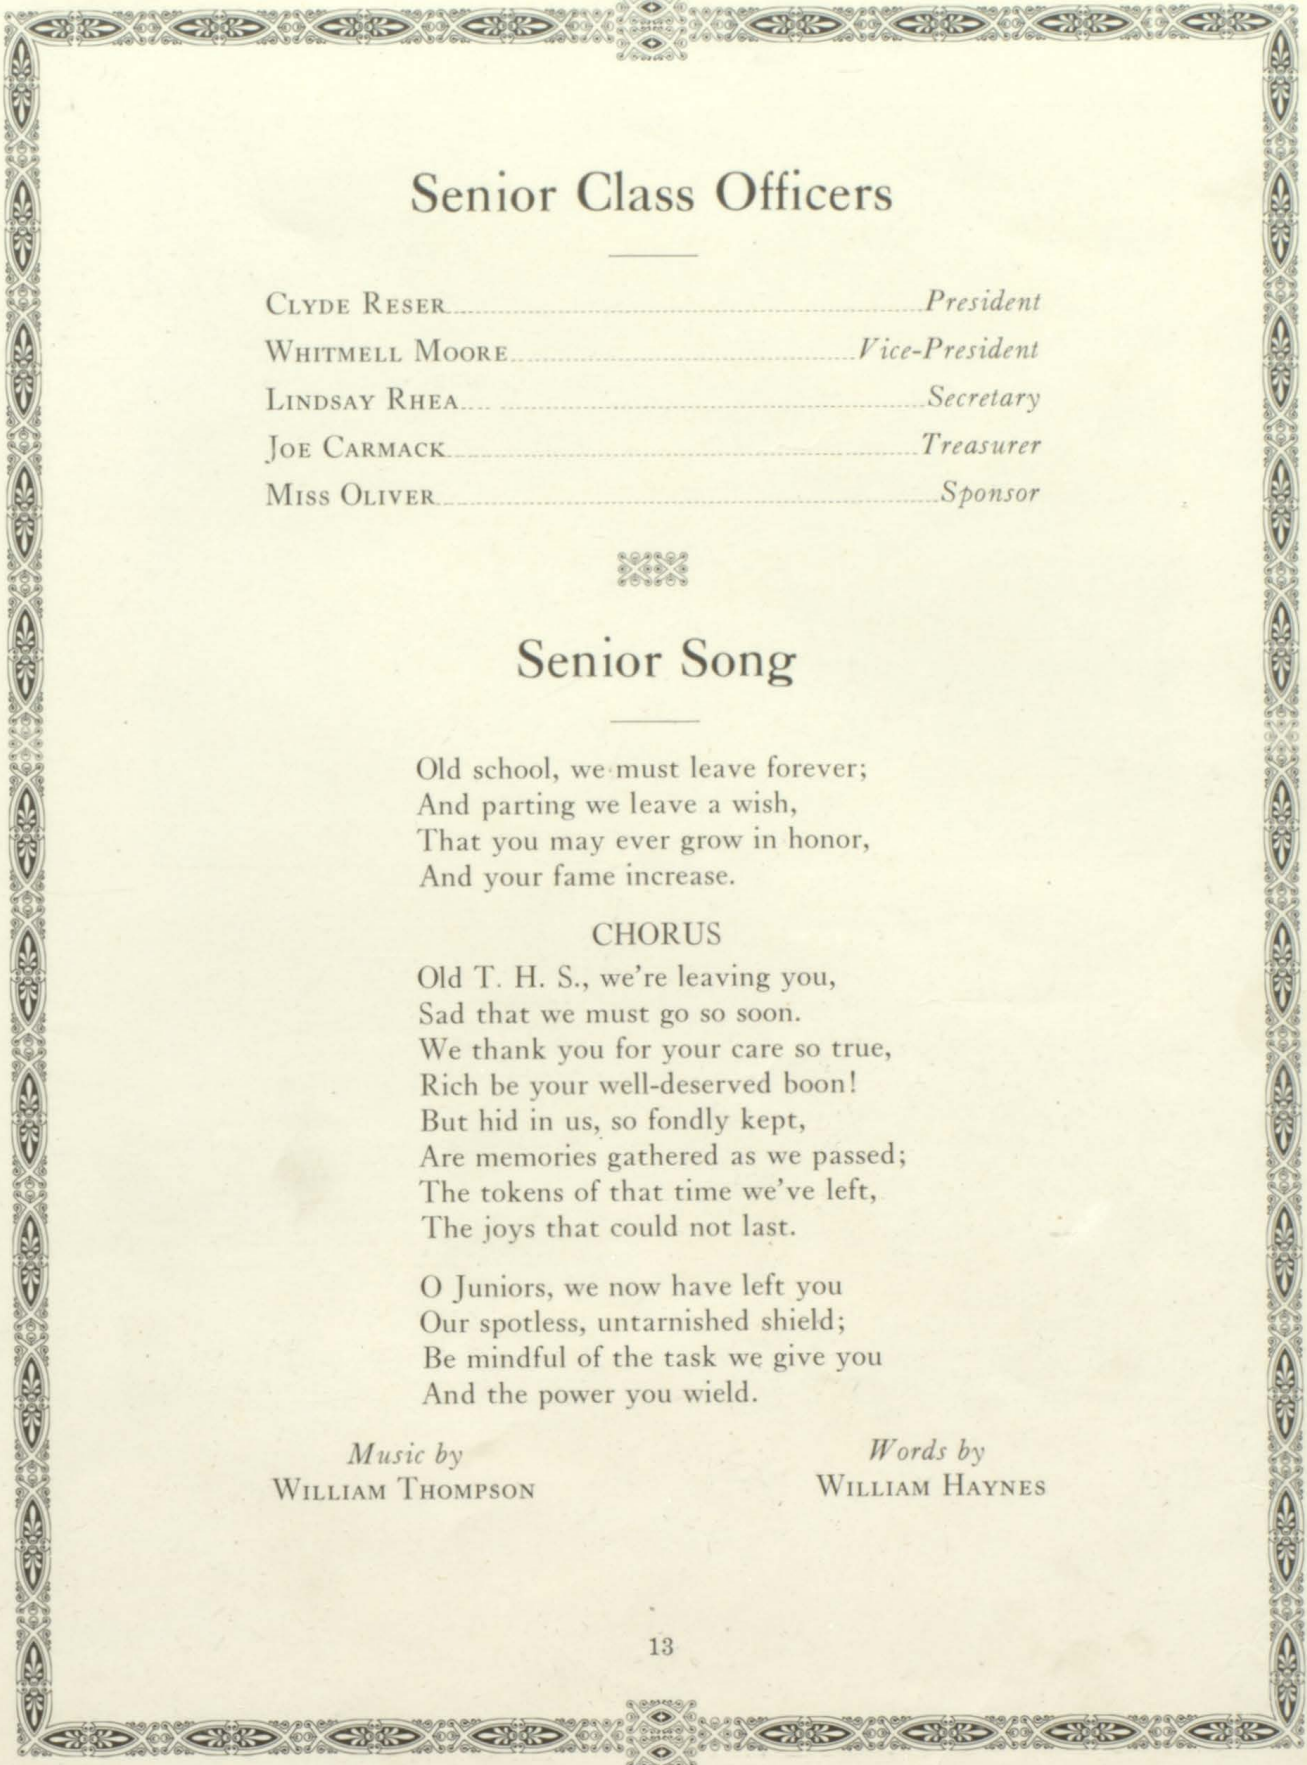

Again I hear the dismissal bell,
And see the crowded halls;
Everything has a story to tell—
Even the writing on the walls.

I see the gym, I see the grid,
And Virginia as our foe;
Then our team and what they did—
When they struck the final blow.

I can even hear the cheering
Of the peppy Freshman Class,
As the goal our team is nearing,
With an intercepted pass.

These things are dead, and yet they live;
At least, they do for me;
But Oh! what I would give
To know they're not just a memory.

Senior Song

Old school, we must leave forever;
And parting we leave a wish,
That you may ever grow in honor,
And your fame increase.

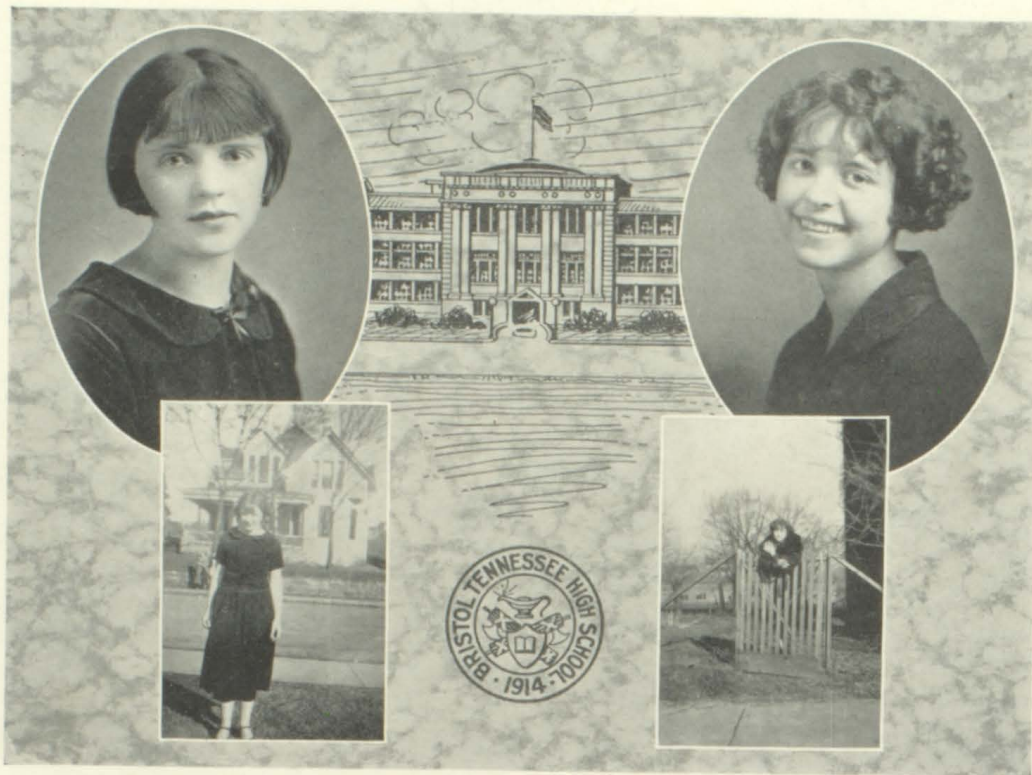

CHORUS

Old T. H. S., we're leaving you,
Sad that we must go so soon.
We thank you for your care so true,
Rich be your well-deserved boon!
But hid in us, so fondly kept,
Are memories gathered as we passed;
The tokens of that time we've left,
The joys that could not last.

O Juniors, we now have left you
Our spotless, untarnished shield;
Be mindful of the task we give you
And the power you wield.

Class History

This is not the history of a class,

Many were grafted to the parent tree.
About the year of '21, the first
Made entrance moved by a thirst
For knowledge; many more in later years
Have made us fifty-one well-rounded dears.
Our doings in our first year are forgot
By man—we hope by God remembered not.
For such an innocence possessed us then
As might have led where 'tis forbidden men;
But wisdom grew, discretion took a hand,
Till on sagacity's wide bank we stand.
Safely we passed; sold hot-dogs and candies;
Admired the Seniors and like them turned dandies.
'Twas then our many talents, loosed from sleep,
Awoke, and from their caves began to creep
Into the day. What would you have? Is it love?
'Twas our first art, borne from above
By Cupid's dart. A scholar do you seek?
Where's John Range, from whom is seen to speak,

From her clear and silver gilded throat,
Wisdom in serene and lofty note.
Or wish you music? Gibson, Thompson, come!
And prop upon your lightest magic tone
This mortal soul to Heaven's gorgeous gate.
Is it for athletes you wait?
Call Whit and Huck! Send for and bring them all,
Who played and mastered every sort of ball.
Let them be crowned with every champion's wreath,
And be acclaimed by thousands folded breath!
Beauty blooms and bursts within our midst;
The fairest girls that ever yet have sidst
Upon a May-queen's throne are here. Would you have wit?
Just take a look upon the class—that's it.
For if such scenes will not pull out a laugh
You shall never laugh in all your life.
There never was such band of hearts alive
As those that met the good year '25.

Frolic to the rolling of the sea!
Gayer hearts were never had;
Worst and worse and only bad.
Jolly, rowdy, rough and glad
Are we.

Lazy and carefree and happy we go,
Yo, ho, ho!
Over life's rolling sea.
Mention the class of '25; it identifies you.

Last Will and Testament

We, the Senior Class of the Bristol Tennessee High School, in the City of Bristol, County of Sullivan, State of Tennessee, Country of United States, Continent of North America, Planet of Earth, being of sound and stable mind and body do hereby announce, affirm, declare, decree, ordain and proclaim this to be our last will and testament in the form and figure following:

First:—To the Junior Class we bequeath that pleasurable and much sought after right of having Mr. Rubins make one of his famed post-chapel lectures after each assembly.

Second:—To Mr. Hawk, we do devise that sacred and solemn privilege of giving each of his Senior Classes, separately and individually, a lecture with that famous saying of Ingersoll's, (or was it Ingersoll's) as a text—"They—the Seniors—shall not pass".

Third:—To the vain and effervescent Sophomore Class we will that much-heralded and lauded Senior ability of getting our pictures "took" after the sixth announcement telling us that then, and at that time was the first, last and only appointed period for making the CADMEA a success by including between its imitation leather covers our beauteous countenances, in hope that by this they may—unusual as it is—get a picture in the 1926 CADMEA.

Fourth:—Brogden Morgan Scherer and Katherine Thomas Nininger leave to Billy Phipps and Lucille Musselwhite, Hubert Baird and Nadine Cates, their bound volumes of love-letters. They are sorry they cannot leave their faithful messenger, Elinor Fletcher, but she bequeaths her place to Clyde Vestal—she hasn't read a word of them either, Clyde, and she hopes this high standard will be maintained. Annette Walker, Lucille McCorkle and Velma Warren bequeath their wild and wooly ways to Roberta Garrett, Elizabeth Harr and Ruth Payne. Violette Berens and Eileen Simpson leave their ability to grow horizontally as well as vertically to Fred O'dell and Willie Gray Jarrett. They say your trouble is too much dissipation and that they recommend a steady diet of Mellen's Food. Graham Gibson will his ability as a tooter to Eugene Pardue (otherwise "Grinny"), with the old proverb (?), "He that tooteth not his own horn, the same shall not be tooted." The Thomases, Virginia, John and Lorena will to the O'dells, Gladys, Herman and Paul, the privilege of having Miss Lynn call each one by any of their various names. William Haynes wills his popularity with the faculty—for satisfactory references see Mrs. Berghauser and Mr. Riebel—to W. A. Whittaker, who seems sadly in need of it. Helen Rhea wills her very well-known (?) collection of cosmetics, including lipstick, rouge, eyebrow pencil, white wash, etc., to Elizabeth Bachman. Bill Nave wills his slow and languid mode of speech to Addie Belle Hitt, while T. S. Gardner wills his rapid fire line of talk to Dalla Vest. John Davis wills his privilege to be "physically incapacitated" on the day of each Chemistry "quiz" to Joe Christian, and, Joe, he says to be sure to disconnect your telephone, as Miss Lynn has a sad habit of inquiring concerning the health of all absent students. Martha Belle Byrd wills, not a Nickle, but her popularity with King College in general to Lillian Owens, Vivian Hawk, Louise Love and Edna Shumaker. Lindsay Rhea and Elizabeth Muse will to Mary Elizabeth Collins and Ruth Morton their semi-permanent positions in the lower hall as sales-ladies of "warm puppies". Rodney Dew, Huckleberry Keesling and Bruz Strain will their ability to slide thru on all subjects and also to drag seven subjects thru six periods to Scott Booher, J. T. McIntyre, William Musselwhite, and John Esser. J. W. Glover wills the management of the football team to Jack Stone, however, he says, Jack, that this does not include a certain well-worn path to the home of a certain young lady on Shelby Street. Evelyn Cowan and Christine Gray, our outstanding flappers and philosophers, will their low and gentle voices to Eleanor Smith and Martha Carlton, with the hope that they will increase them in both diameter and volume. Charles Gray, Roy Hamlet, and D. B. Lilley, three Seniors who are hearty exponents of the adage, "To be seen and not heard", will their ability to follow out the precepts of the said adage to Bobby Cartwright, Carrie Maness and Ruby Marion, three brilliant young lights of the Junior Class. Ethelyn Grimes and Ruth Knott will their rosy cheeks and sweet lips to Louise Brown, Ethelyn Elam, and Helen Bunn. Girls, believe it or not, they say that they do not use "drug store roses". Ruby Crumley and Anna Lee Hicks will their stellar English IX records to Amelia Davis, Elizabeth Newland and Thelma Williams. Kathlyn Clayman wills her Cicero text to Kathrine Millard, Kathrine Keller, Elizabeth Cowan and Elinor Andrews, with the advice that hundreds are not made on exams by sight translations in class. Clyde Reser wills his magnificent ability to take American History out of school to John Waterman and Albert Cowan, two promising young Juniors who find taking it in class three times a week very unsatisfactory. Whit Moore bequeaths the captaincy of the football team to John Lipscomb, with the advice that shieking and athletics do not go together; in trying to mix them he ruined his health. Betts Copenhagen and John Range will the full records of their past love affairs—volumes tho they be—to W. B. Cash, David Dishner and Wendell Rhea. If you profit by the experiences given in these you cannot help but succeed in affairs of the heart. Jim Delaney wills his dignified and solemn countenance to Joe Delaney, for use in Economics class. Jack Rucker bequeaths the position of basket-ball manager to Billy Davis—with the advice to profit by his mistake and consult the Alpha Omega Literary Society before contracting for any games around "George Birthington's Wash-day". Frances Sherfey and Vivian Smith leave their loud voices and boisterous ways to Anna Lee Ager, Mildred Aldrich, Elizabeth Fugate, Gladys Rutherford and Gladys Seneker. Martha Moomaw devises her patent hair waver to Joanna Miller, Ruby Sells, Ida Shipley and Beulah and Mary Sparger, with the encouragement that straight hair may be fashionable now but curls will come into their own eventually. Robert Booher and Red Payne will their premier places in the Glee Club, as second Carusos, to Cody Vance, whom they implore not to let their fresh green (very) laurels wither but to keep the good work up. Jack Owen and Eugene Senter will their fixed positions in the stellar ranks of the Chemistry class to Nita Kensinger and Blanche McCroskey; and while they feel that the two beneficiaries will do nothing rash they wish to remind them that Mr. Riebel's motto is "You can't kid me, I'm patent leather".

Joe Carmack wills his cross-the-lot path to the home of a certain young lady on Holston Avenue to an unknown Junior whose name he refuses to divulge.

Signed and sealed on this, the last day of May, in the year of our Lord, one thousand, nine hundred and twenty-five.

WILLIAM J. THOMPSON, Attorney-at-Law.

Witnesses thereto:

LINDSAY RHEA, Secretary.

Senior Class Prophecy

After I was given this job as prophet of the '25 class, I tried numerous devices for foretelling the futures of my classmates. After a long search I succeeded in securing a machine that Mr. Woodman had just invented. It is a twin cylinder smoke grinder with gazing crystal ball bearings, which, when connected to the current of imagination, gives an invisible picture of any person whom you know, at any time in the future.

With some practice I got the machine to working. I saw on the mystic plate of the machine, a tall man in officer's uniform, conversing with more soldiers. This was William Thompson, the governor general of the Philippines. The mystic disc made an awful whir, and I immediately saw inside the cabin of an airship. The captain was T. S. Gardner, who, having given up all hopes of another world war, had entered the trans-Atlantic passenger air service. There came a vision of a man drawing funny pictures. This was Morgan Scherer, America's best loved cartoonist.

I saw Vivian Smith at a desk busy with many letters. Vivian was secretary of the New York Y. W. C. A. The next scene was a gay one. It was of Eugene Senter and Alfred Strain and their company of well-known comedians, The Tennessee Fun Makers.

I could see a very business-like young woman in an office busily checking records. Here I received a very pleasant surprise for she was Elizabeth Muse, the chief librarian of the Congressional Library. In the Supreme Court Chamber, there sat William Haynes, as one of the judges. William had made a marvelous record as a Constitutional lawyer before he was appointed to the Supreme Court.

John Range, as shown on the mystic disc, was the owner of the A and P Stores of America, and under his management they had doubled in number and strength.

The great Four Million Theatre could be seen. Here Christine Gray, the most renowned actress in the modern dramatic world, was acting. Katherine Nininger was engaged at the same theatre. Katherine had just returned from Paris, where her wonderful soprano voice had charmed all of Europe.

Barrow Dew showed up next in the person of a wealthy writer. He had made a great discovery and had written a book about it. The name of his book is "The Art of Living Without Work". Then there was Barrow's publishers, John Davis and Whitmell Moore, owners of the National Publishing Company, as well as the Washington Times.

The next was in a radio broadcasting studio, where three young women were to give talks.

The first one was Violette Berens, the teacher of short hand at the National Commercial College. Violette's talk was on the "Simplicity of Shorthand". Kathlene Clayman, the instructor of Latin at Columbia University, made a talk on "Modern Latin". The other speaker was Elinor Fletcher. Her talk was on "How to Make Your Husband Happy". Elinor is still looking for a husband.

I then obtained a view of a fashion shop in Paris, under the management of some young American women, Lucille McCorkle, Virginia Thomas and Anna Lee Hicks. These young ladies, being displeased with the New York fashions, decided to go to Paris and start some of their own.

There was the vision of a dark-haired man sitting at a piano, and a large audience charmed by the music. The player was Jack Owen, the world's second Paderewski.

The mystic disc was showing Evelyn Cowan as the lady from Tennessee in the U. S. Senate. Evelyn was showing great ability as a political leader. The scene changed slightly, and the handsome man presiding over the House of Representatives was William Nave. Bill's power as a leader had gained him much favor in that august body.

If the mystic disc is right and in this case we all believe that it is, Ted Lewis will in 1930, have only one superior as a director of orchestras. That will be Graham Gibson.

There was another scene of a private office, which was that of Helen Rhea, the president of the American Red Cross.

A vision of the Kilorcure Drug Co. came on the mystic disc. This, in connection with the Kak-eaters' Retreat, was under the management of John Thomas.

I saw Betts Copenhaver and Charles Payne at a large hotel. They were its owners, as well as a whole chain of hotels from Canada to Key West, Florida. Their chief object was to accommodate the travelling population.

The next scene was one of an athletic council meeting, where the leading football coaches of the country had met to set the rules of the game for another year. There was Jack Rucker, Harvard's coach, and Herman Keesling, Yale's coach. Huck and Jack had been made coaches of these big schools on the account of their knowledge of the game, and their ability to handle the teams.

A scene of a beauty parlor came on the mystic disc. Many women were going here to have their faces remodeled. This shop was managed by Frances Sherfey, Ethelyn Grimes and Ruth Knott.

The government was constructing a new building in Washington which was to be the headquarters of the Air Service. This new structure was to be one of the finest pieces of architecture in America. D. B. Lilley was the architect of this great building and J. W. Glover was the construction engineer.

The mystic disc gave the vision of the Blue Bird Tea Rooms, which was under the management of Ruby Crumley, Eileen Simpson and Lorena Thomas. These young ladies had decided that the best way to put their domestic science knowledge into use was to start a tea room.

The mystic disc fished up a scene of the State Capitol. Here Lindsay Rhea had just been sworn in as governor, to succeed her husband, and was called "Ma Lindsay".

There was a scene of V. I. College, and of Velma Warren its president, and of Eula Whittaker the athletic director. They were doing everything they could to keep the college first class.

The vision of a large factory could be seen. This was the Eatmore Ice Cream Co., the largest in the South. It was owned and operated by James Delaney, Charles Gray and Robert Booher.

A millinery store could be seen. Here the latest styles were appearing. Martha Belle Byrd and Martha Moomaw were the managers.

Roy Hamlet was teaching economics at Sullins, and still had his job at King Printing Company after school. He was not the printer's devil, now, but the president.

I could see the vision of a doctor's office. I was surprised when I saw the doctor, for she was Annette Walker, a real professional woman.

The next scene was in June. Clyde Reser who had become a great novelist, caught the spirit of June for the first time in his life, so Mary Alice Leininiger and he were married and were honeymooning in sunny Italy.

This is all, and I wish each and every one the best of luck.

Jokes

HINKY—"I couldn't sleep at all last night—the shade was up."

MARY JANE—"Why didn't you get up and pull it down?"

HINKY—"I couldn't reach across the street."

O, chemists skilled, investigate,
Answer this quiz of mine,
I think I know where carbonate,
But where did iodine?

MONK—"I bet that girl's father owns a wood yard."

GEORGE—"Why?"

MONK—"I just saw her lumbering up the street."

I kicked a mongrel cur,
It let out an awful wail;
Where did I kick it, sir?
Oh! thereby hangs a tail.

HANK—"That girl pulled something on me that made me howl."

RODNEY—"What was that?"

HANK—"My ear."

"Osteopaths are not the only ones who make money rolling the bones," says John Lipscomb, as he remembers the J. C. Tournament.

Walter, our janitor came to a hospital to see how a friend of his was getting along. The doctor in charge of the case told him that his friend was getting fine, that he was at present convalescing. "Well," said Walter, "I'll jest set down and wait till he's through."

You sing a little song or two,
And have a little chat;
You make a little candy fudge,
And then you take your hat.
You hold her hand and say good-night,
As sweetly as you can—
Ain't that an awful evening
For a great big healthy man?

AMATEUR GOLPHER—"I find I hit the ball on the top every time. What's the cure for that?"

PROFESSIONAL—"Turn the ball upside down."

"I'd like to get out with the girl that said 'The woman always pays'," says Whit Moore.

"Ikie! Ikie! my poor boy, for why you buy an all-day sucker at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon?"

HUCK (in cheap restaurant—"I'll have a slice of that blackberry pie."

WAITER (shooing the flies)—"Tain't blackberry; it's custard."

Two Scots were fishing, but were new at the game.

"Got a bite yet, Jock?"

"Naw," said Jock, "I don't believe my worm's half trying."

GRAHAM—"What a wide acquaintance Bill has."

TUBBY—"Yes, she does seem a bit stout."

"Look, papa, Frankies' cold is cured and we still got a box of cough drops."

"Ooh, vot extravagance! Tell Paul to go out and get his feet vet."

Bill Thompson sent the following telegram to a friend: "Washout on line. Cannot come."

He received this reply from his friend: "Come anyway. Borrow a shirt."

DICK HELMS—"Why is it that women learn more readily to swim than men?"

J. T. McINTYRE—"Easy, boy; who wants to teach a man to swim."

JOHNNY—"Did anyone hold you up out at Big Creek?"

SLIM—"Hold me up? Say, they had to carry me."

A neighbor swung a baseball bat,
Now Thomas doesn't do so.

MISS OLIVER (in Medieval History)—"Joe, what do you know about the age of Elizabeth?"

JOE CARMACK (absently)—"She'll be seventeen in a few months."

PARSON—"What! You want to be married to this man? Why! he's as drunk as he can be."
